Commander Bullock was a member of a New York regiment, and was elected Commander of the Grand Army in this State at the last Encampment, which was held In this city. He was also instrumental in the formatton of the Camp of the Sons of Veteraus at Mobile, and at the time of his death was Surgeon of the Alabama and Tennessee Division of the Soos. Communiter Dailock was at the head of the formlog of the society known as the "Blue and Gray," and took a large interest when the great gun, "Lady Slocum," was secured for the City of Moblie. RELIEF CORPS HOME LIBRARY.

The fame of our National Relief Corps Home, Madison, O., is extending, and voluntary gifts and bequests are multiplying. The following correspondence will show how an unsolicted library has been assured forming the nucleus around which friends of the Home can build by the addition from time to time of new and choice publications, By the way, we learn that Mrs. M. J. Sherwood, Painsville, O., a venerable and patriotic woman, has also proposed to establish a Home library. NEW YORK, Oct. 12, 1891.

Miss KATE L. COOLEDGE, National W.R.C. Home, Madison O. DEAR MADAM: About a year ago I began the establishment of a library in the village of Unionville. It was nearly as possible free to all who desired to make use of it; merely nominal charges being made, sufficient only to keep the books in order. I intended to add more books from time to time, hoping the people would come to know and appreciate the benefits of such a donation, and the spirit in which it was made. The result has under your charge, therefore I request that you will accept them as a gift from myself to the Home; I only regret that it is not larger and more interesting. As I am informed that in similar cases the cost of these books is about $200, With most cordial wishes for the prosperity of the Home, and for the comfort and happiness of all its family, I remain, very sincerely, yours, HARRIET WHITE. OFFICE OF NATIONAL HOME, Madison, O., Oct. 19, 1891.

Brevis: One of the most pleasant occasions ever held jointly, under auspices of both the Grand Army and Sons of Veterans, occurred the other evening, when George C. Strong Post, 534, of Brooklyn, presented to the Camp of the same name, known locally as the "Gallant Sixty-Ninth (its Division number being 60), an elegant frame containing the Camp's charter and imperial photographs of its charter members. Preceding the presentation speech, made by Past Com-mander Charles G. Curtis, of the Post, and the speech of acceptance by Frank S. Curtis, present Commandant of the Camp, the Post opened in due form, mustered in H. R. Sherwood, closed in form, and then admitted the younger men and their friends, the program of the evening being as for lows: Presentation and acceptance of frame on behalf of Post and Camp respectively; original song, The Grasp of a Comrade's Hand," P. Kennedy, Abel Smith Post, G.A.R.; song (solo) "The Wee Bronze Button" (original) Rev. Dr. Fairhead; address, Commander John 8 Skillman, Strong Post, G.A.R.; addresses by Com-mander A. D. Spalding and Post Commander M. C. Shattuck, of Middleton Post, and by Past Commander David W. Wilson, of Strong Post. While the number of addresses were out of proportion to the musical part of the program the speakers were all so good and so thoroughly enjoyable that even the chronic growler, to be found in all associations of men, could not find fault, and he went home fully satisfied that he and all with him had had a very pleasant evening. Strong Camp is nothing if not original. Its smoking concert of last Winter, in which noted speakers took part, is remembered by all who attended, and many are the requests received that Chairman of the Entertainment Committee Frank Johnson will again set to work and produce another similar entertainment. The Camp's cry, modeled upon various military and college cries, is as follows: "Sixty-nine N. Y. S. V. A.; Rab, Rab, Rah; Siss, Booh, Ab-h-h!! which, when issuing from a quarter of a hundred lusty lungs, is enough to awaken the policeman on the beat. It is just such a cry as is heard when Yale gets a touchdown or a member of a prominent athletic club wins an open-to-all race upon ground. The new organization of S. V. Guards may be received with favor by Strong Camp, but as a number of the members are officers or enlisted men in the State and National services and are, through the drill season, fully occupied with the military duties pertaining thereto, it is questionable. The Camp will hardly take an initiative step for or against the idea, but will see what other Camps in the vicinity will do. The idea is an excellent one, but should not conflict in any way with the organized and recognized National Guard, especially where there are such good military organizations as are found in Brooklyn and New York. In the smaller cities, if properly supported the Sons of Veterans Guards will undoubtedly be highly successful and form an excellent second reserve for the National Government to call upon should it need soldiers at any time; and the present Commander-in-Chief of the Order is just the man to establish the military rank upon a sound and successful basis, if any one can do so. New Camps have been mustered as follows: G. I. Rose, 210, West Bloomfield; Capt., Clarence Fox; First Lieut., G. M. Tyler; Second Lieut., R. P. Webb. Maj. F. B. Ward, 211, Tottenville; Capt., E. J. Gross; First Lieut., Adolphus Stewart; Second Lieut., John McCaffrey. I. H. Peckham, 213. Hannibal; Capt., Bernice I. Bothwell; First Lieut., Grant B. Charters for Camps 209, 212, 214, and 217 have been approved, and are soon to be mustered.

These Camps having failed to report for one year, from Sept. 30, 1890, their charters have been revoked: H. D. Grant, 38, Boonville; A. B.
